"HITLER HOLDS KEY TO EUROPEAN PEACE" -- KNICKERBOCKER

Speculate On What His Attitude Will Be When Rearmed

REARMING IN THE AIR

German People Are Taught
They Are Destined To Rule

(Note: Adolf Hitler, more than any other man, holds the key to European peace. H. R. Knickerbocker declares in the 34th article of his series, "Will War Come?" What his attitude will be when Germany is sufficiently rearmed to make victory probable is the question not even Hitler himself can answer at the moment, Knickerbocker writes.)

BERLIN, Mar. 23.—(INS)—Germany is morally re-armed.

Pacificism is the No. 1 crime. Nine million German males from 15 to 30 are too young to have been in the last war. They are the majority of all males from fifteen to fifty. They, the youth of Germany, want to live and die as heroes, not as common men.

They believe, and the entire German nation is taught today, that the Germans are a race of lords destined to rule.

These are the moral factors that point to German willingness for war.

But Germany also is rearming especially in the air and eventually may recover the military superiority she had on the continent in 1914. Germany, too, has driven a wedge between France and Poland and has successfully prevented a "preventive war."

These are the instruments of German willingness for war.

Finally Germany wants to unite in the third Reich the eighty to eighty-five million Germans in Europe of whom fifteen to twenty million live outside present day Germany. She wants to recover everything she lost in the last war. She wants to win in addition, sufficient territory either continental or colonial to provide the space she considers necessary for her prosperity. In the end the Germans hope to replace the French as masters of the continent.

These are the German aims. Most of them are incapable of realization without war. These moral factors, these instruments and these aims of Germany point to eventual war.

All this is not decisive for the question, "Will War Come in Europe?" The most serious consideration must be paid to factors which speak against German willingness, preparedness and aims for war.

Germany is not yet prepared for war. The vast majority of neutral, as well as anti-German technical, military opinion in Europe believes that Germany cannot again become as strong absolutely as she was in 1914 in less than three years, even if she had a completely free hand to rearm. She may never become so strong again relative to her potential enemies because while Germany rearms, others, according to every indication today, will arm upward with equal if not greater speed.

These are instruments against Germany's willingness for war.

But not less important at the moment is the fact that Adolf Hitler himself does not want war. This is reported not because he has said it so often but because he has made nearly all Europe believe it, because he has made his own people believe it and because according to the best qualified observers who ought to know he has made himself believe it.

He declares and believes that he does not want war not only today when Germany is unable to hope for victory but also tomorrow when she may think she could be victorious. Amongst thirty of Europe's leading statesmen, kings, dictators, foreign ministers, war ministers and chiefs of general staffs interviewed during the course of this investigation, not one failed to declare that Hitler is sincere in declaring he does not want war now or in the near future. Almost every one of them, however, qualified that not even Hitler himself in his own heart is able to say today what his attitude toward war will be when Germany is sufficiently rearmed to make victory probable.

When that time comes Hitler will probably be, as he certainly is now, the one man in Europe who will be decisive for the question, "Will War Come?" He is today more nearly omnipotent in Germany than ever. His power, based on Germany's mythical concept of him as a prophet of the German blood brotherhood, is almost absolute. He controls the thoughts and feelings of his countrymen to a degree most difficult for a non-German to understand. He can do with Germany as he likes.

He is the first German chancellor since the war with sufficient authority

GEORGE W. WOODRUFF DIES

Harrisburg, Mar. 23.—George W. Woodruff, member of the Public Service Commission and close friend of Governor Gifford Pinchot, died in the Harrisburg Hospital today of pleurisy. He was 70. Death came shortly after 10 o'clock this morning.

Woodruff, who was a class-mate of the Governor at Yale, and was a member of President Theodore Roosevelt's famous "tennis cabinet," died just a few months less than two years after his appointment to the Commission on July 16, 1931, for a ten-year term. His appointment, however, was never confirmed by the State Senate. His nomination was sent to four sessions of the Upper House, but each time, the Republican organization leaders, in their utility feud with the Governor, buried the appointment in committee.

Woodruff, who made his home in Berwyn, a Philadelphia suburb, served his classmate in three different capacities: as attorney general in the Pinchot cabinet of 1923 to 1927; special advisor on utilities questions during the 1931 investigation, and finally as public service commissioner.

His death was a shock to his friends at the Capital. Only this morning, hospital attaches reported he had spent one of the most satisfactory nights since he entered the institution a month ago. He apparently suffered a sudden relapse this morning. Death came precisely at 10:05. At his side was Mrs. Woodruff, the former Ann Alfreda Foster, of Warren, who had attended her husband constantly during his confinement.

DISMISS 30 TEACHERS

Johnstown, Mar. 23.—With 1500 students in Cambria High School "holidaying" because of dismissal of teachers, school authorities in three communities were considering means of ending the strike today. More than half the student body of Fernside High, near here, bolted from classrooms in protest against a blanket dismissal of 30 teachers. Pickets were started in the streets and pupils attempted to rule sentiment against the dismissal of all high school teachers in the community.

Greensburg, Mar. 23.—Held without bail on a charge of kidnapping, William Roy Porter, 32, of Vandergrift, was in the county jail here today as the climax to the disappearance of 15-year-old Lillian Forney from her home in that community last Saturday. The girl was returned to her home yesterday by police chief Johnson of Vandergrift.

TORCH OF LEARNING BURNED 100 YEARS

Free Educational System Was Established in State in 1934

TO HAVE OBSERVANCE

(Note: On April 1 Pennsylvania begins the observance of the centennial of its free school system. Herewith is the first of two stories written expressly for the occasion.)

By John W. Scotzin
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
HARRISBURG, Mar. 23.—(INS)—The torch of learning, its light diffused alike over rich and poor, figuratively will have burned 100 years in Pennsylvania on April 1 when a week of celebration of a century of progress in public education will begin.

The act establishing the free educational system in the Commonwealth was signed in 1834 by Gov. George Wolf. It set up, by means of taxation, the system of the school district organization which exists today within each municipality.

State educational leaders are completing plans for a gala observance with a view to impressing every citizen with the significance of the accomplishments in the field of education the past century.

Gov. Gifford Pinchot, by official proclamation, has designated the first week in April as Pennsylvania Education Week to provide "... An opportunity for our citizens to familiarize themselves with the changes and progress during a century of advancement in public education, and to pay tribute to those who founded our system."

FARM BOARDS SPUR GROWTH IN ENGLAND

British Farmers More Backward Than Other European Neighbors in Joining

CONTROLLED BY GOVT.

(Note: This is the second of a series of five articles in which International News Service presents a survey of agricultural co-operation in European countries. The first article told of the birth and development of the co-operative movement, and the present status of farm co-operation in Great Britain and the steps being taken by the British Government to aid agriculture.)

By H. K. Reynolds
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
(Copyright, 1934, by I. N. S.)

LONDON, Mar. 23.—(INS)—British farmers, more backward than their European neighbors in joining and developing co-operative associations, are now being forced into co-operation, and into the co-ordination of their efforts in order to take advantage of governmental schemes for the improvement of the agricultural industry.

The early protagonists of co-operative agriculture dreaded the intervention of the State in farming, but in Great Britain today the Government has assumed control. National marketing schemes make it necessary for the farmers either to build up a co-operative structure within the official governmental organization to make their voice heard or to accept the lead of the State.

"Planned agriculture" is the watchword of the moment, and the carrying out of the policies of the Government with respect to the agricultural industry may be and are, in fact, regarded as having a revolutionary character.

This has been brought about as follows: Agricultural Marketing Acts passed by Parliament in 1931 and 1934 have set up boards on a commodity basis, composed of elected representatives of all registered producers of the commodity in question and two persons nominated by the Minister of Agriculture.

The boards may be organized to handle primary agricultural products or secondary products manufactured therefrom, and they have already been organized to direct the marketing of pigs, bacon, eggs, and milk.

Individual branches of agriculture are thus given statutory powers to improve their efficiency through co-ordination.

Among the functions of the Government boards are the powers to determine the quantity, quality and price of products delivered by the farmers; to buy, sell or hire to the producers anything required for the production and sale of regulated products; to facilitate credit for the farmers to help them in other ways.

The boards are self-governing bodies, and they have a monopoly of the production and sale of the particular commodity over which they exercise control.

This sweeping scheme for the reorganization of agriculture, now getting into its stride in Great Britain, was originated by the late Labor Government and brought to fruition by the present Coalition Government.

Since the war the policy here has been to form large co-operatives by the fusion of smaller societies, and the resulting organizations cover the entire country, although their membership numbers only about 71,000, according to the records of the National

MAN, 83, IN COURT ON ANNIVERSARY OF HIS BIRTHDAY

Joseph Clark, Forest Grove, Appears As The Defendant

IN A DAMAGE SUIT

Verdict Given in Plaintiff's Favor in Sum of $221

DOYLESTOWN, Mar. 23.—Celebrating his 83rd birthday anniversary in court, Joseph Clark, of Forest Grove, took the stand in his own behalf in civil court here on Wednesday.

Clark, white-haired and straight as a poker, is the defendant in a suit in which Harvey W. Walton, of Roslyn, is suing for damages amounting to $2,766.96, suffered in an automobile accident.

According to the statement of claim, the plaintiff Walton, who is a sub-foreman for the Western Electric Company, seeks to recover $2500 for personal injuries; $81.48 for loss of wages; $10 for traveling expenses; $15 for towing his car, and $9.48 for medical expenses.

Patrolman Henry E. Hand, of the Penna. State Highway Patrol, who investigated the accident, testified the collision took place on the Lackawanna trail, south of the Working-men's Home, on November 4, 1932.

Clark, who was operating a truck, told the court he was only driving about 10 or 12 miles per hour when the accident happened. He was later treated at the Doylestown Emergency Hospital for injuries.

With him at the time of the accident was John Cloud, fifteen-year-old youth, who stated Mr. Clark had some difficulty facing the bright lights on the cars passing him. It required him two hours to make the trip from Germantown to the scene of the accident, and he also stated that Mr. Clark drove with two of the wheels off the highway most of the time.

Dr. Claude L. Taylor, County Seat physician, who treated the plaintiff, described his injuries as consisting of lacerations of the head, a sprained back and shoulders, and suffering from shock.

Harry Doan, a garageman, who repaired the plaintiff's car, placed the valuation of the car at about $175 before the accident. Repairs would have amounted to $150 in order to put the car into first class running condition.

Deliberating scarcely a half hour, a jury late on Wednesday afternoon returned a verdict in favor of the plaintiff, who was awarded the sum of $221.

Concluding a five day trial, a jury after deliberating several hours awarded a verdict of $3135 in favor of Janney Stone Quarries, Inc., of Langhorne, in an action of assumption, versus Collins & Maxwell, Inc., of Easton. The plaintiffs claimed the sum of $5010, alleged to have been suffered by them because of a breach of contract. President Judge Hiram H. Keller presided.

ASK BUSINESS MEN TO OBSERVE GOOD FRIDAY

Daughters of the King of St.
James's Church Make
The Request

IS DONE IN OTHER CITIES

An effort is being made here to have the business places close on Good Friday and in general to have the day observed reverently.

The movement originated here with the Daughters of the King of St. James's Episcopal Church and the co-operation of business men and individuals is solicited.

"We endeavored to have a day observed, last year," stated the spokesmen for the organization. "We were rather late in starting the movement, last year, so we thought that we would get things underway in ample time, this year."

The plan which is suggested by the Daughters of the King is to have the business places close from 12 o'clock noon on Good Friday until three o'clock.

A movement such as this has been in effect in many of the large cities, throughout the country. In Philadelphia this year boys from 250 Scout troops have enlisted to distribute 40,000 cards carrying the message "Closed for Good Friday." These cards are displayed by the stores.

It has also been announced in Philadelphia that no theater or motion picture house will open until three o'clock on Good Friday afternoon. Operators of P. R. T. trolleys and buses have been instructed to bring their vehicles to a full stop for one minute, from 2:55 to 3 p. m.

Proprietors of local business places are requested by the Daughters of the King to co-operate and close during the hours specified.

Decree Made by Judge Marks
Of Berks County Court

DOYLESTOWN, Mar. 23.—Judge Hiram H. Keller and Calvin S. Boyer yesterday handed down the opinion of Judge Frederick A. Marks, of the Orphans' Court of Berks County, in the petition of Rudolf P. Hommel, archaeologist, asking for a declaratory decree.

Hommel was hired some years ago by the late Dr. Henry C. Mercer, builder of the internationally famous Mercer Museum of the Bucks County Historical Society in Doylestown, to conduct researches in China.

By the will of Dr. Mercer, dated September 22, 1925, he established a trust, in the executors, in the sum of $100,000 for the promotion of archaeological research and the public dissemination of knowledge arising therefrom, through the instrumentality and channels of the Bucks County Historical Society.

Certain misunderstandings and disputes arose following Dr. Mercer's death and the trustees of the will, according to the petitioner, made a settlement with the understanding that the work would be immediately resumed and prosecuted by the petitioner under their supervision and direction.

Hommel was paid for his research work up until a certain time, leaving a balance in the fund of $85,401.89. Hommel subsequently rendered other statements that reached a total of $5659.16, which the trustees refused to pay, pleading a breach by the petitioner, and their consequent termination of his employment.

The petitioner expressly assumes the status of "beneficiary of the trust fund" and claims all rights appurtenant thereto. The trustees, denying, assigned him the status of "a salaried employee" of the testator and of the trustees. They contend that the right of discretion, control and determination rested in the testator and, at his death, under his will, vested and now remains in them.

Testimony was heard in the case several months ago in Doylestown before Judge Marks. Judges Keller and Boyer did not sit in the case owing to the fact that both jurists were connected by membership and official capacity with the Bucks County Historical Society.

The sixteen-page opinion was handed down today. The expedition to China and other research work of Hommel and other services performed by him, as well as the contract and will, were discussed at length in the opinion.

The decree, in part, is as follows: "It is the duty and within the authority of the trustees, until the reasonable completion of the expedition, to promote and prosecute the work, and to employ the said Rudolf P. Hommel, or some other person or persons, fitted thereto, and to discharge such employees for cause or at will."

"It is the duty of Hommel, and his successor, to faithfully prosecute the field work when and as designated by the trustees, prepare and transport to them, photographs, materials, implements and field notes; assist in classifying and arranging them in the museum of the Bucks County Historical Society, edit and assist in publishing them for the use of the Bucks County Historical Society, and do all things reasonably incident thereto, giving and devoting his time and efforts exclusively to the uses and purposes of the trust and of his or their employment."

"The employee has no personal right to fruits of the expedition, nor to any publication thereof."

Judge Marks further decreed that the costs of this proceeding be paid by the trust estate.

New York City, Mar. 23.—New York City today resembled in many respects an army camp as scores of mounted and foot patrolmen marched the streets on the look out for further violence in the strike of 5,000 taxicab drivers. Police were frankly fearful that the next 24 hours would bring a repetition of the series of outbursts which were described as the worst riots in New York's history.

SILLY LEGISLATORS

How ridiculous a legislature can make itself seldom has been illustrated better than in the case of the Kentucky house of delegates in trying to get President Roosevelt's help in a local row.

It all happened because a member of the legislature, in a letter to the editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, sharply criticized his colleagues. The name of the writer, at his request, was not published with the letter.

The house asked the editor for the name. This was refused on the proper grounds that it would be a violation of confidence on the part of the newspaper. Exercising what it thought was its power to mete out punishment for contempt, the house had the editor placed in jail. There he remained an hour before being released on habeas corpus proceedings. His trial on a contempt charge then was ordered and held, and he was fined $25.

This, however, did not satisfy the dignity of the legislative body which found childish expression in a renewed demand for the name of the writer of the letter that had hurt its feelings. The demand again was refused. The lawmakers then happened to recall that the Courier-Journal is owned by Colonel Bingham, present ambassador to Great Britain. They promptly demanded of the president that he recall Ambassador Bingham unless the latter forced his newspaper to reveal the name of the letter writer.

Such a proceeding might be excusable in a group of children, but for men regarded as intelligent enough to make the laws of their state it becomes so ridiculous as to appear pathetic.

HEADLIGHTS

Headlight blindness is one of the most dangerous hazards of night motoring, a hazard not only to the occupants of automobiles and to property, but to the pedestrian. In fact, walking at night along state roads or even the more remote thoroughfares is a matter of taking one's life in one's hands and might well be termed "The Suicide Club."

To the conscientious driver of an automobile glaring headlights are a source of torment. He sees two moons approaching him down the road. On they come growing into two shafts of light and finally lose their individual identities as they bear down upon the tense driver. For a matter of seconds there is nothing visible before him but a fog of light. That interval of light blindness is enough, however, to leave death and destruction in its path.

Few drivers in these times are so careful that they will bring their cars to a stop at the approach of the glaring headlights. It is not to be wondered at that there are so few for a spot cautious enough to stop for the passage of blinding light would soon find that he had betted stayed at home so far as progress on his journey was concerned.

Despite crusades against the glaring headlight the menace continues.

Final proof of returning propriety will be a higher price for having a guy bumped off.

But why do big nations need protective armament if the little ones don't?

After all, the best test of human manners is a dumb bridge partner

"THE LONE WOLF'S SON" by LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE

SYNOPSIS

Michael Lanyard — formerly known as the "Lone Wolf," an underworld celebrity, but now a respected antique dealer—sails for America on the S.S. "Navarre." Aboard ship, he meets Detective Crane of New York, who hunted the "Lone Wolf" years ago. They talk of Lanyard's reformation preceding his marriage, and the tragic death of his wife and children while he was at war. Later, Lanyard sees a young man dart into the passageway leading to his (Michael's) cabin. He is startled and perplexed by the youth's resemblance of himself. Lanyard's dinner companions are the wealthy Mrs. Fay Crozier, one of his patrons, and her lovely daughter Fenno.

CHAPTER III

Through his connection with Delibes et Cie, he had known Fay for years as a customer who had from time to time sought his advice in respect of additions to her celebrated collection of jewels. A full-blown creature, lively and kind, the strangest combination of grande dame and gamine, with the presence of the one and the don of the other, he had from the first liked her without knowing more about her than that she was mistress, by marriage, of millions; holding what he heard of her caprices immensely entertaining, and admiring the woman for her light-hearted refusal to be smothered by her indisputable social station while at the same time keeping her skirts clear of the slightest smirch of scandal. Accepted everywhere, but stubbornly declining to be anything but herself, she had come to be more than a mere personage—Fay Crozier was a transatlantic tradition.

Fenno was in her own way no less individual and in no way like Fay, a nymph as delicate in every aspect as Fay was extravagant, yet every whit as vital, of a pensive turn but quick with her peculiar wit, restrained of gesture and at the same time spirited, incomparably pretty and as fine-strung as a daughter of the Faubourg St. Germain—she was captivating.

"Homeward bound as always, madame," Lanyard was musingly saying, "heavy with loot from Continental treasure-houses?"

"Oh, nothing worth talking about this trip. I had set my heart on the Gresham jewels, but Alice Islip—drat the woman!—beat me to them, so I had to be satisfied with a few odd trifles."

Fay Crozier rattled through a sketchy catalogue, an inside knowledge of market values enabled Lanyard to reckon that she hadn't laid out more than three hundred thousand dollars to purchase her disappointment.

"Bargain," he gravely nodded. "You must be thinking your expenses as good as wasted. Unless, of course, you have omitted something."

The white head seemed to give the suggestion serious thought but in the end was again vigorously shaken.

"One heard it whispered you were dickering with Rumbold's for the Habsburg emeralds."

"Not dickering, really. I barely alluded. Rumbold's demand too much." Her eyes wide and limpid, she had mentioned a sum in a tone which conveyed that she had never heard of so much money. "No, indeed, I didn't buy myself a single thing to wear—except, of course, some clothes."

Amazing vagary! This parcel of flesh still fair at fifty evidently would think her person as good as bare if clad in clothing only.

"One is disappointed; one had hoped to get, through you, another glimpse of those matchless stones."

"I couldn't afford them. And an-way, the duty would have been wicked. You know St. Stephen's emeralds, then?"

"But well, I assure you. It so happened that they were in my possession for several days, back in the last week of 1920."

"Not kidding, are you?" Fay inquired. "But I always understood that you—"

"Had forsaken my iniquitous courses prior to that time?" Lanyard considerably finished for her. "Madame has reason—the Lone Wolf's last exploits as such antedated the war by years. No, the emeralds came into my hands quite by chance. They were being conveyed from Budapest, at the time, to the deposed emperor in Switzerland, where, if you remember, he spent his first months of exile. As luck would have it, anti-Royalists got wind of their travels and plotted to intercept and seize them. They would have been successful,

Demurely lowered lashes flew up to unveil a query which Lanyard met with a smile that might have meant anything; whereupon Fay Crozier closed at discretion the lips she impulsively had parted and feigned a sudden interest in the overtures of the male on her right, leaving Lanyard to savor the satisfaction of a man who feels he has surprised a guilty secret.

Passengers who had answered the dinner call more punctually were beginning already to trickle out between the tables. Lanyard marked Crane as that one drifted by without a glance his way, and told himself the American had a perfect professional presence. Though, true to his promise, he hadn't dressed, whereas almost everyone else had, he contrived to be the least conspicuous of figures, so self-effacing as to be almost invisible in any gathering unless one made a point of looking at him. A plain man, minding his own business.

Lanyard glanced obliquely at the question of that business. It was none of his, to be sure, but he took the liberty of being mildly skeptical. He didn't give a great deal of credit to the casual account Crane had rendered of his present fortunes. Men of his gifts and native aversion to questionable practices were apt to have a thin time of it, with private agency as well as police employment barred to them. To be of much use to clients who required protection from crooks, a detective needed to keep a finger constantly on the pulse of crook-life, and he couldn't do that very well if he refused to consort either with crooks or with the powers that preyed on them. The ordinary last resort of a man in Crane's plight was the national secret service; but the only thing one could be sure of was that, whereas Crane might be telling the truth when he claimed to be a lone wolf in his own line, if he were in the Government service he would lie with his last breath to cover the truth.

Hitler Holds Key To European Peace, Says Knickerbocker

to make all the concessions necessary to ensure peace as long as he wants it. What other German statesmen could have made the non-aggression pact with Poland giving up the corridor for ten years? Brüning, had he done it, would have been crucified. Hitler controlled his storm troops in Danzig. He can control them in the Saar and in Austria if he will.

This is the moral factor that controls Germany's willingness for war and for the moment speaks against it. Finally, though Germany aims at a great many goals that could only be achieved by war they could be achieved, of course, only by a victorious war. And in contemplating war Germany, too, must contemplate what might be the result of a lost war.

A lost war, Germany as a whole is convinced, would mean first of all the end of modern Germany as a united state. No pacifist propaganda could be more effective than the maps just published by National Socialists pointing out "what the enemies of Germany want." France, according to this forecast, would take the entire left bank of the Rhine; Poland would get a great slice of North Germany including most of her Baltic seacoast; Czechoslovakia would get most of Saxony and the rest of Germany would be divided into independent German states, a tiny Prussia around Berlin and states of Hannover, Saxony, Westphalia, Württemberg, and Rhineland.

But a lost war would mean the inevitable end of National Socialism. Germany would have tried within one generation, the Hohenzollerns, the Republic, and the Nazis. After all these, had failed, only Communism would remain. The next war, lost by Germany, would mean reduction to a condition only a little better perhaps than her condition after the thirty years' war.

These are the counter-balancing considerations to Germany's national aims, they speak against war at least until Germany is absolutely confident of winning.

How soon could Germany be confident of winning? This is the one all-important factor in the question "Will War Come?" Without a dissenting voice of every military authority consulted in the course of this investigation has declared that to organize, train and equip an army comparable to Germany's army of 4,000,000 in 1914 she would require at least three years starting from today, and that it would cost her around forty billion dollars. And she could only do that if she could work without fear or restriction. Considering the fact that she still suffers from fears, though from fewer and fewer restrictions, it is the opinion of the majority of these experts that five to ten years would be necessary. These opinions gain weight by the fact that ninety per cent of them are from anti-German sources.

To specify, as one expert put it: "Germany could put in the field tomorrow a superb force of 100,000 men, the Reichswehr; in three months from Reichswehr reserves, police and storm troops, she could have another 200,000, making 300,000. In a year, with a free hand she could have 500,000 to 600,000; in 18 months 750,000; in two years a million first-class soldiers. But even German ingenuity and efficiency could not go higher than that."

Nobody of authority believes the German land army equipment in heavy guns, tanks, machine guns is as yet anything like enough to supply such forces. But as the modern formula now has it, "the decision lies in the air." Here the observations of experts are incredibly divergent but there is enough positive material to make German air armaments the chief cause of European anxiety today.

A French military aviation journal declared Germany has 42,000 pilots of whom most are militarily qualified. A neutral military expert who has spent years observing Germany told me on the other hand he did not believe Germany had twelve militarily qualified pilots. A French major of aviation put the figure at 200.

A French general of great authority told me he considered the German bombing air fleet already superior to the French. Captain Guest in the British House of Commons declared Germany had 1,099 civil airplanes capable of being turned to military service. In this city it has become known that the German government has just purchased from an American firm for $75,000 apiece three large passenger airplanes obviously capable of transformation into bombers.

General Herman Goering, air minister of Germany, has publicly avowed the minimum demand for thirty to forty per cent as many military airplanes as those possessed by France, Belgium, Poland and Czechoslovakia, the countries bordering on Germany. The official Nazi "Voelkischer Beobachter" reckons French planes 4,546, Belgian 500, Polish 1,000, and Czech 700, a total of around 7,000, "with around 3,000 reserve planes in the background." On this reckoning the German demands would be for at least 2,100 to 2,800 military airplanes. On more conservative reckoning Goering is said to have asked for 1,200 planes.

This is the principal reason why Europe is pessimistic. If Germany's official air fleet numbered from 1,200 to 2,800 how many would the others build? Soon the skies of Europe may be dark with warplanes. In the balance of forces for and against war, the weightiest arguments speak for peace during three, five, ten or perhaps more years. But the armaments race has already begun. No armaments race in history ever ended with anything but war. Can this one be checked? With Great Britain lies the answer.

(Tomorrow—Knickerbocker writes from London "Britain is alarmed.")

The state celebration will be inaugurated on the evening of April 3, with a series of special programs in the forum of the Education Building at Harrisburg under the sponsorship of the Department of Public Instruction.

Following a discussion of the inception and importance of public education by Dr. James N. Rule, public instruction superintendent, two dramatizations will be presented by the faculty and students of the Shippenburg State Teachers' College.

The legislative session of 100 years ago which approved the common schools law will be depicted in the first act while the second will review the memorable address of Thaddeus Stevens, acknowledged champion of free education, before the General Assembly a year later which was credited with saving the measure from repeal.

Leading spellers from 40 counties will participate the following day in final eliminations in a state-wide championship spelling bee. The evening will witness, through dramatizations, an old-fashioned school session, and, in contrast, a modern school project with a series of demonstrations showing results obtained under present day methods.

Early opposition to the school law arose because the rich were unwilling to pay for the poor and the latter frequently unwilling to pay the small proportionate share imposed upon them. Time, however, ultimately wrought a change of attitude.

Farm Boards Spur Growth In England

The most successful co-operative agriculture effort in Great Britain was the development of the hops industry in 1929, when 85 per cent. of the fields were under the control of one society, which has now been dissolved.

Several attempts have been made in England to organize a commercial outlet for the agricultural co-operatives, but all have met with failure. The Agriculture Wholesale Society, which was organized in 1918 to buy from and sell to the farm co-operatives, found the going too difficult, and went into liquidation in 1924 with a deficit. This left the British agricultural co-operative movement without an autonomous central body.

The third article in this series will describe the agricultural co-operative movement in Scandinavian countries, where, especially in Denmark, it is widely developed.

CROYDON

Court Croydon, No. 24. Order of the Golden Sceptre, celebrated its tenth anniversary Tuesday evening at their hall on Locan avenue. A short business session occurred with all members present, including Mrs. Charles Schweiker, at whose home the first meeting was held on March 4, 1924. Visitors from Trenton were present with the Deputy giving a short talk and praising Court Croydon on its success. The supper table occupied the center of the hall, with all the delicacies of the seasons, to which every one did ample justice. Music and dancing concluded the enjoyment.

On Sunday Mrs. Elizabeth Sottung entertained her daughter, Mrs. C. Dader, and family, Philadelphia.

Mrs. William Wilkie motored to Philadelphia on Wednesday where she visited friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Fagley, Rockledge, were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Fagley.

On Sunday the Misses Reda Duffy and Edna Short, Philadelphia, will be guests of Miss Marie Fisher.

Monday, April 2nd, will be the first meeting of the Croydon Needlework Guild for this year. Everybody is welcome at any time from one to four to join in the sewing. Take thimble and scissors.

NEWS BRIEFS

LEBANON--(INS)--Robert Frazier, colored, made the cardinal error of crooning to a pair of dusky damsels instead of only one.

The generous apportionment of his melodious attempts between the girls precipitated a free-for-all in which each demonstrated adeptness at carrying. The women, Dorothy White and Dorothy Davis, landed in the hospital for repairs while Frazier took to his heels with the police behind him.

HARRISBURG--(INS)--The bootleggers' pleas for mercy will not fall upon sympathetic ears in the Dauphin County Court.

"Just at the beginning of our new law, it is important that we enforce it," Judge John Fox has declared. "Violators will be dealt with rigidly. We give notice to the public that violators of the liquor laws, as they now exist, will receive very heavy sentences."

Judge Fox followed this comment by sentencing John S. Jenkins, Harrisburg, to pay a fine of $300 and to serve six months in jail for sale and manufacture of liquor without a license.

NEW SPRING HATS MAKE WINTER ONES SEEM OLD-FASHIONED

By Nadia De Beaud

(I. N. S. Fashion Correspondent)

PARIS — (INS) — After seeing the new hats shown at the dress collections, those I see on women in the street actually look old-fashioned, for the change for summer wear is fundamental. Whereas Patou shows hats that have little wings over the nape of the neck, like Dutch Bonnets, or toques with veiled effects of horse-hair, Chanel makes women especially feminine by placing shallow shell-like creations entirely made of tiny flowers.

Maria Guy follows a new line, for her hats sit closely on the head with only a slight tilt. The crowns are shallow owing to a fold in them. The brims are all wide, sometimes standing straight out, or the edges gently rolled. She has toques with feathers sweeping back, paradise and aigrette. Schiaparelli's hats resemble a policeman's helmet, except that in front they stand far out and often roll up only towards the front.

BURNT ORANGE WILL PROVE POPULAR FOR WEAR IN DAYTIME

By Nadia De Beaud

(I. N. S. Fashion Correspondent)

PARIS — (INS) — Clothes that are wearable sum up the new collection shown by Jeanne Lanvin. For day wear burnt orange, loose, half-length coats are worn over gowns of contrasting colors. The elbow length sleeve of great width is here, although more formal coats have long leg of mutton effects.

For evening wear much scarlet is worn. The gowns are close clinging, some ankle length and others sweeping the ground on all sides. The bare back effects are covered by extremely pretty capes in all materials. Black taffeta is shown both for dressy afternoon gowns and for formal evening wear. The evening cape of quilted taffeta appears in all colors. Many of the gowns have tiny fish tail trains. The Lanvin hats all stand off the face, with brims turned up or rolled, often of shiny cellophane straw.

By Jim Gallagher
(I. N. S. Sports Writer)
PASADENA, Calif., Mar. 23—(INS)—Beware the White Sox!

For the first time since 1920 it looks as if Chicago's American Leaguers are going to emerge from the second division.

You don't hear much pennant talk as the pale hose go through their daily chores here. But you do observe a very obvious confidence that the White Sox will be a dangerous ball club this year. This confidence is based on four factors:

1—Acquisition from the Athletics of George Earnshaw, for years one of the League's great right-handers.

2—Purchase of Zeke Bonura, a powerful young giant who played first base for Dallas in the Texas League last summer.

3—The trades that brought catchers Mervyn Shea and Johnny Pesek to Chicago.

4—The promise shown by Lee Stine, Paul Gregory and Les Tietje, rookie pitchers, and Joe Chamberlain, youthful shortstop.

The first base problem seems to have been solved by Bonura. The New Orleans Italian is six feet tall and weighing 210 pounds. He looks like a wrestler and hits like Jimmy Foss. He's no Hal Chase for grace around first, but he's surprisingly agile, knows how to handle his feet, and has a great pair of hands.

Lew Fonseca feels confident his catching will be far better. He traded Grube to St. Louis for Mervyn Shea, a smart receiver and a good handler of pitchers.

Charley Berry went to Philadelphia in the Earnshaw deal, while the Sox got young Johnny Pesek, a hustler, a good receiver, who hits a ball hard. Earnshaw is one of the Sox' chief hopes. Out of shape all last season, he reported to the Sox 29 pounds lighter than he was at any time in 1933. He's been a willing, hustling worker in training camp, and Sox players and officials alike are counting on him to win at least 20 games this season.

Ted Lyons, long one of the greatest pitchers in the league, is expected to do a comeback, and Ed Durham reports he's in shape once more.

Other veteran hurlers are Sam Jones, still a great Spring and Fall pitcher at 42 years, Joe Reving, and Whit Nyat.

Three rookies also show much promise. There's Les Tietje, who came up from Dallas at the close of last season and beat the Yankees and the Browns handily; Lee Stine, a 20-year-old youngster and Paul Gregory who was brilliant a year ago in the Spring, but faded when the season started.

The Sox will line up with an outfield second to none in Al Simmons, Mule Haas, or French Unalt, and speedy Evar Shanson. Milt Bock, a Chicago youngster picked up from the University of Wisconsin last fall, is the fifth outfielder.

The infield will have plenty of power, with Bonura, Luke Appling, Jimmy Dykes and Jackie Hayes.

PRESIDENT TRIES TO END PENDING STRIKE

Puts All the Power of His Office in Effort to Prevent Threatened Tie-Up

HEARS BOTH SIDES OF IT

By Edward B. Lockett
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)
WASHINGTON, Mar. 23—(INS)—President Roosevelt today threw all the power and influence of his office into a struggle to end the controversy between capital and labor in the automobile industry.

Both sides have presented their arguments to the President in White House conferences. Each was adamant in its demands. Today, Mr. Roosevelt weighed the diverse claims of the two on the scales of economic justice, preparing for vigorous action to bring peace.

What steps he intends to take were not revealed. The word was passed informally at the White House that "some progress" has been made. Otherwise the White House and the interests involved were silent.

The only concrete accomplishment revealed so far was a further postponement of the threatened general strike of workers in the automobile industry. William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, announced the strike will not be ordered pending conclusion of the negotiations here. At the outset of the Washington conferences the strike postponement order was for 48 hours, which would have called 250,000 men out today.

The workers want the manufacturers to recognize their elected agents for collective bargaining, regardless of whether those agents be A. F. of L. officials. Headed by Green, they asked the President to compel such recognition, even if it were necessary to invoke his broad powers to license industry under the industrial recovery act.

Automotive executives assert they will gladly bargain with workers' elected representatives, but will not recognize A. F. of L. men. There, the situation appeared to stand.

Mr. Roosevelt is trying to get one or both factions to yield to some sort of compromise. He devoted his morning hours today to the framing of a peace program on which he hopes both sides will agree.

Both the labor officials and automobile executives were standing by here today, awaiting further word from the White House. The executives at present have no specific engagement to return to the President's office, but the workers expected a call today.

Alvan Macauley, president of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce and the Packard Motor Car Co., A. P. Sloan, of General Motors, and Walter Chrysler, headed the delegation of manufacturers here.

Hot, Dry Summer May Be Handicap for Annuals

A hot dry summer season may be a handicap for most annuals, especially if they are planted in dry, sandy soil. But gardeners who work under such conditions may insure themselves of abundant bloom by trying some of the varieties more suited to the situation. There are several annuals which bear flowers plentifully under hot, dry conditions. The California poppy (escholtzia) is a good example, as is the Star of Veldt, known as dimorphotheca, and the old-fashioned rose moss, or portulaca.

The original golden yellow of the California poppy, state flower of that far western state, has been developed into many beautiful tones of a long color range. Seed should be sown where wanted, because it does not like transplanting.

A foot of space each way is the best method of planting if full development is desired. Where quicker covering of the ground is wanted, 6 inches apart will accomplish the purpose, but it is a good idea to thin the plants to the proper distance as they develop, since crowding results in poor blooms. The California poppy does even better when put in rich soil. In long dry spells, the flowers are likely to be somewhat smaller, but they will receive admirably with an occasional soaking.

Like the western poppy, the South African daisy, dimorphotheca, has been developed to include many variations of color. Originally producing shining, burnt orange daisies with black centers, it may now be had in many colors, and is an excellent subject for the cutting garden. Scorching hot weather affects it but little, and it is one of the easiest blooms to grow. Transplanting should be done sparingly, if at all, as the plant will do best where first planted. Plants should have 6 inches of space.

The portulaca, although not such a versatile flower, is particularly suited to hot weather conditions. They are at their best then, and when used as an edging plant they show up very beautifully.

AN air of confident expectancy hovers over the training activities of the rejuvenated Boston Red Sox this spring. For the first time in many a long year the lowly Bean-eaters will start the pennant race with prospects of getting somewhere. Tom Yawkey, new millionaire owner of the team, has been unobscured by the flaming hose, and as a result the Sox now look like a real class team. From the minor leagues, Yawkey has purchased many of the most highly touted prospects. Both leading batsman of the International League, Julius "Lem" Solters, and the top-ranking hurler of the same circuit, Lefty Fritz Ostermuller, are now members of the Red Sox entourage.

However, the most important additions to the Beantown team are the two stars purchased from the Philadelphia Athletics — Lefty Grove and Max Bishop.

Grove, for some years now, has been the greatest pitcher in the American League. He ranks with Waddell, Plank and Pennock as one of the greatest left-handers ever to grace a pitcher's box. Some baseball men say that he is faster than Walter Johnson ever was. Lefty's blazing deliveries are expected to win at least twenty games for the team now managed by Bucky Harris.

Max Bishop, veteran infielder, will cover the middle bag for the Red Sox, and should bolster their inner defense considerably. While Max is getting along in years, he is still a very capable performer in the field and one of the greatest lead-off men in the big leagues.

"Watch the Red Sox!" That's the word that is being passed around in the big league camps this spring.
